The Human Capital and Economic Opportunity Global Working Group and FAIR are delighted to announce their Summer School on Socioeconomic Inequality Bergen (SSSI 2022) over 5 days, under the direction of Kjell Salvanes and Steven Durlauf.

SSSI 2022 will provide a state-of-the-art overview of the study of inequality and human flourishing. Participants will learn about integrating psychological and sociological perspectives into conventional economic models to understand the foundations of human behavior. Through rigorous lectures, students will be exposed to tools needed to study the dynamic processes that produce conditions of inequality and ways to address it.

During this intense program, students attend lectures, engage in discussions with leading faculty, present their own research, and interact with peers.

Students are selected from a diverse, competitive applicant pool and represent many disciplines including: economics, public policy, sociology, social thought, and social work. Faculty are selected by SSSI directors from the field of economics.

The summer school is open to Ph.D. and early postdoctoral scholars from around the world. There is no program fee for admitted students. Housing and some meals are provided.

SSSI has previously been held in Chicago (2012, 2013 and 2015, 2016, 2017), Beijing (2013, 2014, and 2015), Bergen (2019) Chengdu (2019), Guangzhou (2016 and 2017), Bonn (2016 and 2018), Moscow (2017, 2019), Cambridge, UK (2014), and virtually (2021).

Applications are due May 31, 2022

Details on how to apply, as well as more information, including programs and videos from previous summer schools, can be found at: sssi.uchicago.edu
