PhD Workshop in Public Economics

Uppsala, May 18-22, 2015.

PhD students writing their thesis in Public Economics (broadly defined) are invited to participate in a workshop to be held at Uppsala University, May 18-22, 2015.

The purpose of the workshop is to provide a forum in which papers can be presented and discussed by fellow students and senior researchers. Papers need not be in a finished form and can be on any topic in public economics.

The workshop will also contain a series of lectures on:

“International Taxation: Avoidance, Tax Base Erosion and Enforcement”

by Andreas Haufler, LMU Munich and Niels Johannesen, University of Copenhagen

The keynote speakers will also take part as discussants during the workshop.

The workshop is limited to 15 PhD students and intended for PhD students from the Nordic universities. PhD students interested in participating should send an application by email to Katarina Grönvall (katarina.gronvall@nek.uu.se) with the subject “PhD Workshop” no later than March 22, 2015. The application should include a curriculum vitae (with university, thesis advisor's name, area of interest and research project) and an abstract of the paper to be presented (if any). If the paper is written, please supply it as well.

There will be no conference fee. Lodging and food will be provided for free. Financial support for travel will be available. Welcome to Uppsala in May!
