

An Application of the Loglinear Model

Harry Khamis, Wright State University

Abstract

The loglinear model for analyzing categorical data will be developed from first principles for two and three categorical variables (without going into great detail). Then the model will be applied to a world famous data set, thereby providing new and important information about the historical event related to this data set, and correcting all previous analyses of these data.